

Black Feminist Ethics and Relationality

Q&A with

Charlene Carruthers

Wed, February 16, 5-6pm
(Central time)

RSVP HERE for the Zoom Link

2021-22 SERIES ON BLACK FEMINIST PRAXIS

Charlene A. Carruthers is a writer, filmmaker, and PhD student in the Department of African American Studies at Northwestern University. A practitioner of telling more complete stories, her research includes interrogating historical conjunctures of Black freedom-making post-emancipation and decolonial revolution, Black governance, and Black feminist abolitionist geographies. She is a 2020 Marguerite Casey Presidential Freedom Scholar and Mellon Interdisciplinary Cluster Fellow in Gender and Sexuality Studies. Her work spans more than 15 years of community organizing across racial, gender and economic justice movements. As the founding national director of BYP100 (Black Youth Project 100), she worked alongside hundreds of young Black activists to build a national base of activists in a member-led organization dedicated to creating justice and freedom for all Black people. She is the author of the book Unapologetic: A Black, Queer, and Feminist Mandate for Radical Movements (available in English and Spanish language).