GNDR_ST 341 & ASIAN_AM 360

SPRING
2023

“Sexuality”—as potential, productive, perverse, political, and pleasurable—is taken up in this course as a profoundly dynamic node of power and knowledge. This interdisciplinary course interrogates how “Asian American sexualities” are taken up as a problematic and/or analytic in history, performance, public health, film, sociology, anthropology, literature, and art to discuss diaspora and migration, activism and HIV/AIDS, intimacy and pornography, gender and labor. This course asks, “What are the possibilities and potentialities of Asian American sexualities? How do Asian American sexualities inform our thinking about how we understand, relate to, and imagine the world and what we want it to be?”
